

John MacLean. CV / Resume.

Born in Buckinghamshire in 1969, John spent part of his childhood in Canada and the United States. He began using a camera at the age of 14 when he discovered the book American Images, featuring the work of Garry Winogrand, Robert Frank, Lewis Baltz and John Gossage. After studying mathematics, physics and geology he went on to graduate in photography at the University of Derby. He subsequently worked at The Royal College of Art for four years. John has been a London-based, freelance photographer since 1998, using commercial commissions to support an independent, fine-art practice. His photographs have been widely published in books and periodicals and he has self-published seven books. His books are held in the National Art Archive at The Victoria and Albert Museum and private collections.
